The Brave Portuguese Making Eyes at a Count The King Economizes Welcome, Lady Astor

By Arthur Brisbane

The three young Portuguese girls bound for Brazil made the first 1,000 miles at ninety miles an hour. That speed would have crossed the Atlantic in one day and a half—and it will seem slow fifty years hence.

Great navigators on water, in the air and in the past and present, the Portuguese maintain the big reputation of their small nation.

Now that flying journey would fastest Vasco De Gama and Magellan, the old sailors that added glory to Portugal about five hundred years ago, when they sailed around the south ends of Africa and America, and Magellan's ship was first to sail around the earth.

Mr. Montfort, retired banker, also divorcee from his wife, admits that he whipped her, on a certain provoking occasion—she made eyes at an Italian count, or so he thought. His most serious complaint is that the wife spent $3,500 on cosmetics in one year.

Strange quarrels married people have, especially retired bankers and others, retired, that need some leisure for worrying. This lady's lawyer will find simple answers. He will say: "A fair child, like ten million other women, learned in her sorrow that foolish man's idea of beauty is skin deep. She had to take care of the precious skin—there was no other way."

She learned also, as millions of women have learned, that men get tired of everything, and appreciate least of all the things of which they are absolutely sure. What they can HAVE, they don't want.

Rolling her eyes at an Italian count may be done by any lady, not only innocently but with a luscious desire to bring back a calouse, retired husband and restore his ancient affection.

A lady of women would have learned those cosmetics and that Italian count in a second, and about "not getting" without leaving their seats. When a man, in the language of the cartoonist, "bumps his head on the altar rail," he undertakes to make the bride pay for her death than poor. How many can honestly say that they do not?

The marvel is the patience with which women, after a few years, endure life as first part of the household furniture. Her husband, read "Barbarian" and "The Machine" and take warning.

The English are economizing as though they meant it. The King's fleet yacht, Alexandra, is to be sold to save the annual upkeep of $150,000. We pay more than that to keep up our semiroyal yachts here. And there is no talk of abolishing them.

Years ago, when kings were stronger, peoples weaker, instead of selling the yacht, a little would have been added to the fleet. That recent war taught, no doubt, that kings should learn the lesson in the text war. Each one emphasizes the wisdom of Prudentia's advice, which needs frequent repetition in this country, "monarchs are destroyed by poverty, republics by wealth."

Lady Astor, charming young person and a good parliamentary fighter, is coming and will be welcomed here on her native beach.

It is announced that she will give advice to American women. Probably it will be to "be first, marry an Astor, the rest is easy. If you possess the other three virtues, ENERGETIC, INTELLIGENCE, AMBITION."

The city of Newark invests in pigs. Instead of dumping city garbage on the meadows—to spread annoyance and disease—the city will invest $25,000 in pigs.

They are expected to eat the garbage and pay it a profit. It is an interesting, good idea, although transformation of the garbage into fat and fertilizer would probably be more practical.

The city fathers, all pig raisers can testify, will be amazed at the pigs' resistance to diseases, and its readiness to die. It is not the pig's fault. Naturally a clean animal, he is condemned to live in mud. Dying is the wisest thing he does.

Natick Miss of 19 Disappears on Birthday; Boston Police Search Hotels

Belief that Esther V. Rogers of Natick, who mysteriously disappeared from her home last Wednesday, on her nineteenth birthday, is being held captive in a Boston hotel or lodging house by an unknown man.

This belief was based on a mysterious telephone call received by the girl's parents last night. It came while the aunt was in the Boston home.

"Hold the line a minute," he said. "I have a minute to spare." The next moment the aunt said the voice of a girl who she believed was her missing son. It had just got the work "I wish the voice was choked off at the line went suddenly dead."

The girl's father, at all pig raisers can testify, will be amazed at the pigs' resistance to diseases, and its readiness to die. It is not the pig's fault. Naturally a clean animal, he is condemned to live in mud. Dying is the wisest thing he does.

Auto Sends Horse Into Hole; Firemen Pull Him Out

Members of the fire department were called today to rescue a horse that had fallen into a hole six feet deep, at the corner of School and Tremont streets. The mishap delayed traffic for more than an hour.

The horse was attached to a wagon owned by the Jordan Horse Penning, Frost Company and driven by Garrett L. Reid. The outfit was coming down Beacon street, into Tremont, when the rear of the wagon was struck by an automobile owned and driven by L. C. Way of Waltham.

The impact frightened the horse, which started to run. It had taken but a few steps when it plunged into the excavation. Reid jumped and escaped injury. The wagon did not fall into the hole.

EMMA GOLDMAN TELLS OF GIRL PATRIOT

Describes Heroism of Young
Avenger, Who Was Freed
by February Revolution

By EMMA GOLDMAN.

Stockholm, Sweden, April 1.—Pre-revolutionary Russia stood unique in the world's history for the host of women who contributed to the revolutionary movement.

During 1861-1866 there was much unrest among the peasantry of Russia. In the Province of Tamboff the peasants, exasperated by excessive taxation and the brutality of officials, rose against their oppressors and set fire to some estates. The Governor of Tamboff, Lushenovsky, known far and wide for his savagery, had whole villages flooded by the Cossacks. Half naked, the peasants were forced to kneel for hours in the deep snow, while scores of them were stood up in rows and massacred.

Maria Spiridonova was then a young girl, yet she was interested by her party, the Socialist Revolutionists, with the task of averting the barbarity practiced upon the peasants—to kill Lushenovsky.

SHOT HIM TO DEATH.

Lushenovsky was well guarded. With his Cossack police expedition he travelled from village to village, terrorizing the population and draining the peasants of their last provisions to feed the war with Japan. But the difficulties did not dismay Spiridonova. Posing as a peasant woman, she became the shadow of Lushenovsky. She haunted the railway stations and country roads "in search," as she explained, "of her missing soldier husband."

In spite of imminent danger, privation and cold she kept her long vigilance watch for the Governor till at last he looked for opportunity. As the train bearing Lushenovsky pulled up at the station where Spiridonova had been waiting so patiently and he stepped on the platform, surrounded by his troops, Spiridonova broke through the cordon of guards and shot him to death. Deigned to the waiting room of the station, she was beaten into insensibility, her clothes torn from her body and then turned over to be drunken soldiers.

SENT TO SIBERIA.

The news of the torture of Spiridonova, around the whole world to protest, which saved her from the scaffold. She was sent to Siberia for life, where—as Kierulff afterwards related—she arrived "a mere bundle of raw flesh." In prison her comrades tenderly nursed her back to recovery. But the result of her ghastly experience remained with her—tuberculosis, a crippled hand and the loss of the sight of one eye. But though physically mangled and broken, her spirit continued aflame. The February revolution opened the living graves for all Russian nobles, among them also Maria Spiridonova.

HOW TO SET UP RADIOPHONE RECEIVER

Boston American Expert Tells How Fans Can Cut Cost of Apparatus

By A. H. HODG.

Here are the instructions for setting up a radio-phonograph set that will cost you less than the ready-made sets on the market.

If you live within twenty-five or thirty miles of Montreal, Illinois, it will enable you to listen in on the concert, lectures and Boston American news flashes that are broadcast from the Algonquin station. It will also pick up the data and details of commercial and amateur transmitting stations even farther off.

The entire cost of the set, including the aerial and incidental expenses, will be about $25 at current prices. Later articles will explain how you can cut this price even lower by making some of the parts at home.

LIST OF ARTICLES.

Here are the things you must purchase at any good store which deals in radio supplies. Take the list with you to the store and check the items off.

From 150 to 200 feet of 1-strand aerial wire.

One lightning switch, 100 amperes, 200 volt, double-throw knife.

Insulators for aerial and lead-in; number will depend on the location of the aerial.

One double-slide tuning coil.

One crystal detector holder and piece of galena.

One pair 2,000 ohm phones.

Two feet flexible lighting cord.

One variable condenser, 500 mfd. capacity.

When you have these things safely deposited on the kitchen table, you should next consider the diagram. This is not a picture of the apparatus, but merely shows by a series of conventional lines how the various parts are hooked up or connected.

Diagram for Universal Receiver for Wave Lengths from 150 to 2,500 Meters.

EXPLANATION
A. Aerial. B. Lightning switch. C. Double slide tuning coil. D. Variable condenser. E. Ground. F. Crystal detector. G. Ear phones.

The arrows on the tuning coil and the condenser show that these things are variable; that is, it is possible to alter the effect which these instruments cause in the circuit. It is by these three adjustments, the two on the coil and the one on the condenser, that you will be able to tune your set.

On the various parts you will find binding posts or screws to which to connect the wires. To make the connection remove all the insulation from about an inch of wire at one end and scrape the copper clean. Loosen the screw on the binding post, and then push the wire once or twice as far as possible between the cap and the base. Then tighten the screw so that the wire is held as in a vice.

AERIAL IS IMPORTANT.
Your first consideration will be the aerial. I have explained how to erect one in the last issue, but for those who missed it I will take it up briefly in this issue.

The longer the aerial is under the feet the better your phone will be. Sixty feet is the minimum. Bring it between your house and a tree, or a barn, or a wire line being enough. The higher it is from the ground the better the results will be. Two of the insulators which you purchased you will use at either end of the wire where it is secured to the house or tree.

The remainder of the aerial wire you will use for a lead-in and lightning ground. This is the wire that carries the electrical energy from the aerial to your set.

Connect one end of the lead-in wire solidly to a convenient place on the aerial between the two insulators. Make a solid joint that will hold and solder it if possible.

Set up the lightning switch just outside the window of the room where you plan to use the set. It may be fixed to the house with screws. Then connect the aerial wire to the middle pole of the switch as shown in the diagram, cutting this wire so that it just reaches from the aerial to the switch.

The rest of the aerial wire is the lightning ground. Attach it to one of the other poles of the switch, and run it down the side of the house to the ground. This lower end should then be wrapped about any old metal such as your lawn and then buried about three feet deep.

INSULATE THOROUGHLY.
All these wires must be thoroughly insulated from contact with the side of the house. Remember that a lightning wire "leak" aerial, it will travel down this wire, as well as a lightning rod, towards the arm of the switch is thrown in the proper direction. Always keep the switch thrown in this direction when you are using the set and during a thunder storm.

There is always a danger from lightning when such a ground is provided. In fact, the ground is a certain extent, as the aerial and ground serve as a lightning rod. If your house is insured, have an insurance inspector examine the wiring and the ground.

This is the most difficult part of the setting up of a set, but it is something you will have to do no matter if you bought the set complete.

Fresh From Paris Latest From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France

PARIS means to keep faith with the slender silhouette, but now and then something beautiful happens. Suddenly, above, at the left, is sketched the "Parisienne" and at the right is the exception that proves the rule. Orchid colored satin, with a one-shouldered bodice and a superb sort of drapery over the right hip, expresses this season's slender gown to perfection. A gold thread set with pearls does its inadequate best to protect the undraped shoulder.

A frock in brilliant flame-color is elaborately embroidered on bodice and tunic with silver braid, and worn over a dress of silver. The straight corse, supported by narrow silver straps and the moiré pattern of bodice and tunic, is very much of the season.

Question Box for Radioists

Address all communications for this column to Radio Editor, Boston American, No. 40 Summer Street, Boston, Mass. Questions will not be answered by mail or telephone.

Q.—Will you kindly describe a low distance receiver with a wave length of from 150 to over 2,500 meters? I would like to know the minimum cost of one. Can you give me a hook-up for one?—W. B. Boston.

A.—Here is the hook-up:

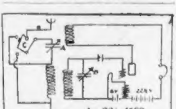

Diagram for Universal Receiver for Wave Lengths from 150 to 2,500 Meters.

This is the cheapest universal set. All coils shown are monocoils. The set is very efficient in longer wave lengths, but will not give as great a distance or cover as great a distance on short waves as other types of specially designed short wave receivers. The set itself should cost around $10 without the monocoils, and a set of coils for wave lengths from 150 to 2,500 meters would cost around $40.

Q.—I read in a wireless magazine of a set receiving from 150 to 2,500 meters. This set contained three variable condensers and three longwave coils. I am going to make such a set. Kindly tell me, if possible, of what capacity the condensers should be, what size coils to use, and what kind of a coil mounting. What size bakelite plate?—D. W. Cambridge.

A.—See above diagram. There is a note about the coils in the diagram which you could use. The size panel for the set should be 10 inches wide by 12 inches high by 1 inch deep.

If you wish to use the third condenser in the longwave section, it should be connected to the plate terminal of the positive side of the plate battery.

Q.—I wish you make a loud speaker from a phonograph horn, and would you need special parts for it?

A.—You need an audio detector to work a loud speaker.

Q.—What is a thicker coil and what is it for?

A.—This diagram correctly shows.

Q.—What is the wave-length of an aerial fifty feet long, fifty feet high, two wires, ten feet apart, located forty feet long?—H. A. D. Hudson.

A.—Fifty feet long, ten feet apart, would be unsatisfactory. There is a device on the market for such a use.

Q.—A coil inserted in series in the plate circuit of vacuum tube radio for feeding back into the grid of vacuum tube the negative energy, thus amplifying the incoming energy and also creating oscillations.

"SISTERS" AT BEACON AND MODERN

"Sisters," the great story by Katharine Norris which has been made into a motion picture by the International Film Service Company, directed by Albert Capellani, is a powerful portrayal of the love of a woman for a man who has been in love with her sister. It is a story of a courageous girl who fought to hold her husband from her own selfish sister and won her fight. It will be shown at the Modern and Beacon next week.

Alta, the elder of two daughters of a doctor, sadly sees her younger sister married to the man of her choice, only to see this romance shattered through a trivial accident. A former friend of the family returns when the father of the girls dies and marries Alta, who seems lonely, but apparently content. The younger sister, after coming home when she has left her husband, learns that her sister's husband has been killed and she has been married, and this discovery starts a romance which bears through all grief and sorrow. The older sister discovers the affair, and it is only through a series of fate that the younger sister is brought to a realization of her reason. The game has been played and lost because it was not played according to rules, and in the end the parties concerned see the light of day.

"Sisters" is a most Irish production and features Scena Owen, Gladys Leslie and Matt Moore. Others in the cast are Mildred Allen, Joe King, Tom Quinn, Robert Schable.

FACTS, FADS AND FASHIONS OF BOSTON'S STAGE AND ELSEWHERE

LIGHT AND SHADOW, But Mostly Light! Grace Bigel, whose feathery toes twinkle so mischievously in the "Greenwich Village Follies" at the Shubert Theatre. There's something about the show that should please every member of the family.

"WELCOME STRANGER." Charming Sylvia Field is no stranger, but she's welcome just the same. Just now she's lending her talent to "Welcome Stranger," the amusing play at the Tremont.

ROSA PONSELLE, whose rise from humble circumstances to the luxury of a great singer, should encourage vocal beginners. She comes to Symphony Hall April 9.

A MASTERPIECE MASTERFULLY ACTED! Charles S. Gilpin, who gives such an astonishing performance of the ex-actor in Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones," current at the Seaverns, is probably the best colored actor that ever graced the American stage.

IF THIS WAS A PAINTED PORTRAIT it probably would be signed "Pretty Girl with Hat." However, it's a camera portrait of Lotus Robb, George Arliss' talented leading lady in "The Green Goddess" at the Plymouth.

INTERPRETING LIFE in terms of Poetic Motion! Pavlova, the immortal, who brings herself and her art to the Boston Opera House on Tuesday, April 11.

M. ALEKHINE of France, international chess player, who defeated 12 players at the Palais Royal while playing blindfolded. He has issued a challenge to the world's champion, Capablanca.

SAY IT WITH GREEN BACKS! When father gets the bill he's likely to say something else. This $10,000 gown will be one of the features at a Chicago fashion show. Fashioned of cotton satin crepe and studded with 10,000 rhinestones. (International News Reel)

(SHOPPING MAD! This is not a riot, nor is a "ho" movie beauty, around to draw this mob. It's just the shopping hour in Lids, Poland, when thousands flock to the great open market. Like sheep, they are for the most part forced to move with the crowd. (International News Reel)

IF HER HEART DOESN'T BEAT FAST You'd Better Beat It! Because that means she doesn't love you. At least that's one of the indications made by this new device, which measures a heart beat. Dr. W. V. Moody of the Cook County Hospital, Chicago, is shown measuring the heart beat of Miss Doris Stoker just after she has been kissed. No. Over, the doc did not kiss her. (International News Reel)

"YES, MADAME, Take Two Pills Tonight, Then Skip an Evening." "I'm sorry, doctor, but I couldn't skip rope for 15 minutes." A little conversation between Dr. David Cottrell in his machine and an imaginary patient. Dr. Cottrell, whose home is in Chicago, is believed to be the first physician in the country to equip his car with a radio phone outfit. Important messages are relayed to him from his home while he is making calls. (International News Reel.)

EXCLUSIVE PHOTOGRAPHS of the only two women members of the Ulster Parliament, Mrs. E. A. Chichester, O. B. E., M. P. from Derry (at left), and Mrs. Murphy, O. B. E., whose late husband was mayor of Belfast for 2 years. The latter is also a magistrate and alderman. (Wide World.)

"OH, HER LIPS ARE LIKE THE RED, RED ROSE," and they're Very Natural, Goodness Knows! After that you can expect anything, but Miss Doris Hill (at left), a San Francisco girl, says that real rose petals, cut and shaped to fit the lips, is a wonderful improvement on mossy lipsticks. (Underwood.)

OH, SPLASH! Pedestrians owe a vote of thanks to W. G. Smith of Hove, England (at auto hub), who has just perfected an anti-splashing device. In a recent test on a muddy road the wheels failed to splash a white sheet stretched along the wayside. (Underwood.)

20TH SYMPHONY PROGRAM IS INTERESTING

Gilbert "Suite From Pilgrim Pageant" One of the Offerings

Three, and three only, numbers comprised the program that Mr. Monteverdi offered to his audience at the twentieth symphony concert yesterday afternoon. However, the three numbers that he had selected were of sufficient interest, so that there was no feeling of anything lacking; variety, for instance, was often felt when the program is so restricted in scope.

The Handel concerto in F major for strings and two wind orchestras covered the program, and was followed by the Gilbert "Suite From Pilgrim Pageant." For those who had not journeyed to Plymouth last summer to see and hear the pageant, the music was of unusual interest. It is full of color and depicts with skill the subject in hand. Mr. Gilbert was in the audience and acknowledged the applause of the house several times.

The closing number of the afternoon was "Psychic" by Cecil Frank. To supplement the orchestra there was rather a large chorus of men's and women's voices, and to further enrich the music of the French master, Laura Lillieford appeared as soloist.

She has been heard here on several occasions and her voice needs no comment. She sang her share of the oratorio very acceptably. The Frank version of the legend of Cagli and Psyche is an interesting one because it is so abstract in treatment. It is, in fact, not in the least lacking in length.

ELLA KOLAR AT SYMPHONY

Miss Ella R. Kolar, the Chicago girl who recently made such a name in the operatic world while in Italy, has returned to the land of her birth and will make her American debut at Symphony Hall on Friday evening, April 21, at 8 o'clock. Miss Kolar first studied at the Price Arts Building in Chicago, where she was fortunate to attract the attention of Signor Clotilde Campanini, the impresario, while studying at the St. Louis Conservatory of Music. Acting upon the advice of Campanini, she went to Italy to study under Signor Battista Valentini. Her dramatic training was under Signor Battista Valentini.

FOKINE AND FOKINA RETURN

Michael and Vera Fokine, the originators of the Russian Ballet, who drew the largest audience which ever assembled at Symphony Hall when they visited Boston a year ago, will return for one more performance, this evening, April 12. Fokine and Fokina will dance the "Mousetrap" which they invented for the Metropolitan Opera last year. It is a scene from "The Tale of the Two Cities" and one from "The Tale of the Two Cities."

TESTIMONIAL PERFORMANCE

Through the courtesy of Messrs. Brainerd, Dillingham and Zieffels, and Mr. George White's "Scandals" on Monday evening, April 16, at the Colonial Theatre will be given a testimonial to Ernest Grenier and Archie Bartlett of the theatre's box office staff.

PAVLOVA

Anna Pavlova, who, direct from her triumphs in Paris, London and New York, will give performances at the Boston Opera House on Tuesday evening, April 11, and Wednesday afternoon and evening, April 12.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY "Army and Navy Night" to Aid Trade Union League

By BETTY ALDEN

AMONG the hosts of nations actively interested in the four benefit performances being given at the St. James Theatre in aid of the Women's Trade Union League of Boston, is Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons.

I am told that Mrs. Emmons has set herself to stage an "Army and Navy Night" at the St. James Theatre when the first performance of "The Silent Witness" will be given. Five women in Boston, if any, have done more for the disabled veterans of the World War than Mrs. Emmons. It was she who organized the "Pledge-Me-Not" day last year, by which $100,000 was cleared in short order for the men who needed aid the most. More recently Mrs. Emmons has rendered effective service in organizing the Disabled Veterans of the World War, Incorporated, through which it is planned to "carry on" the men who served their country.

Officers, both of the army and the navy, have been only too glad to show their appreciation of her spirit by helping her to put her enterprises over, with the result that a number of prominent officials have taken part in the performance next Monday evening. The latter include Major-General and Mrs. Clarence H. Edwards, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Taylor of the Charleston Navy Yard, Major Murray, executive officer of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, Major James H. Thorne, former commander of the American Legion, General Charles H. Cole and General Edward L. Lugin also are expected to be present for the occasion.

I note that Miss Lillian Innes, daughter of Mrs. Charles Innes, of Boston and Medford, will take part in a French play, "La Poudre aux Yeux," to be presented by the Radcliffe Circle Français at Radcliffe Theatre next Wednesday evening.

Miss Innes, who made her debut several years ago, is now enrolled as a regular student at Radcliffe. On Thursday, Mrs. Lowell, who has been a student at Radcliffe for several years, will spend a goodly portion of the warmer months of this country in Scotland. Prior to her entering Radcliffe, I believe that Mrs. Innes studied for some time at Cornell, which reminds one of the fact that girls of the "first family" continue to be more and more inclined to regard their education as a less secondary and college careers more primary.

There are many other girls prominent in the younger set who have followed the more strenuous social activities, and are now doing so. On Thursday, Mrs. Lowell (Henrietta Sargent) was among the prominent guests giving lunch at Fern's. Others entertaining there were Mrs. Louis Levingston and Mrs. Frederick O. Beach.

Mrs. and Mrs. Harold Osgood White, who joined the Boston colony in Palm Beach, some time ago, will have as their home guest at the Florida resort, Miss Isabel Leonard, who is now over from Miami.

Princess Helene has joined her mother, Mrs. Margot Asquith, at the Ambassador Hotel in New York, and will sail with her on April 4 for England. The famous wife of Britain's former prime minister, has just completed a very successful lecture tour, and is said to have addressed on less than 75,000 people during her extensive tour.

But to go back to "La Poudre aux Yeux"—another member of the set, the presentation next Wednesday evening is Miss Marion Valliant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Valliant of Commonwealth avenue. I recall that last summer in aid of the Radcliffe endowment fund, that Mrs. Valliant opened the house and grounds of her summer estate at Chatham for a number of such affairs. I believe that Mrs. Valliant herself is a graduate of the Cambridge College, and with both a mother and daughter claiming it as their Alma Mater, it is only natural that the Valliant family be very much interested in Radcliffe.

Attention of Miss Innes, she was one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Catherine Bush and James J. Cullen, son of the Godfrey family. The ceremony, which took place a few years ago, attracted a fashionable host of guests to St. Paul's Cathedral. The Catholic canon, naturally, was much in evidence, as well as a large slice of navy tradition, the bride being the daughter of an ex-Commandant Bush of the navy yard.

Young Mrs. James Cullen is to take one of the leading parts in "Now and Then," the play to be given the last week in April by the Vincent Club. Mrs. Cullen, who has been living with her husband in Cambridge this winter, is affairs during the past season. Last year the young people made their home in Charleston, W. Va. At present the parents of Mr. Cullen, the Godfrey Lovell Cullen are travelling abroad.

THE Edison Company did not in its beginning fulfill all the requirements of a Public Utility. Its service was experimental, limited and inferior. Investment in its stock was speculation.

Experience and invention have changed this. From being an uncertain enterprise it has become an indispensable public service.

It gives the best service at the lowest possible rates. And the return to its investors is supervised by the State Department of Public Utilities.

The house was left to Harvard by a man named Sharpe, who removed all the partitions so that the place was left little more than a shell.

Here we have to get down to the short hairs of the hair and down to the catchers counting 14 per cent of the total of the season's catchers, the defensive values count. FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

H. P. Davidson, the dynamic Morgan partner, whose health and nerve broke down from overwork during the war, writes that he is getting ready to come back to New York from his place in Georgia, where he has been recuperating during the winter. Both Mr. Davidson and his friends declare that he is now in distinctly better condition than at any time since his breakdown.

Harry, as his intimates call him, hopes to be able to get back into the financial arena in a mild form, following his return to New York, during the month years from the 1907 panic to 1910, he was the foremost number of the younger generation of banking leaders.

It is interesting to learn that Mr. Davidson's son, Harry P. Jr., has entered the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. as a clerk.

One of the youngest men recently admitted to membership in the firm, George Whitney, also started as a clerk in Morgan and made his mark in the bond department. Young Whitney is declared by other bankers to be one of the biggest "comers" in the financial world.

What would happen if the public took the bit in its teeth and came clattering into the stock market? Prices have been remarkably without any very extensive public support, the protection of the rank and file of investors and speculators has been a very variable boom. That something of this kind will occur at the close of the current year is not more than possible.

Meanwhile, however, it is well to recognize that securities have recovered much more prominently than industry and business, and that should public buying continue to increase a fairly serious market might easily occur. It is not an alluring market for margin operators. Yet, if it were, it would be a long, open, and business, good securities only and a decline advance substantially in market value within the next year or more.

German marks at less than one third of a cent may be a fact, but it is extremely doubtful if they are. Russian rubles at the time looked quite as bleak as the mark has happened to them.

Some of those who play an active part in the financial market have themselves to thank for the position they can find after the day's turmoil is over. Most of the followers who have been in the market have been in the market for a few months in the winter and a few more in the spring, and they have been in the market for a few more in the summer and a few more in the fall.

There is a lot of talk about the "bull" market, but it is not a bull market, it is a bear market. The "bull" market is a market in which the price of a security rises, and the "bear" market is a market in which the price of a security falls.

Matt Moore

"If you ever loved me, now is the time I need you most," cried Runaway Cherry Strickland, who finds herself crushed in the arms of her sister's husband.

Within the walls of Alix Strickland's home, a courageous girl whose heart has starved for love fought a battle of Sister against Sister. The fight of one woman to uphold, and the other to destroy the marriage relation. This is the scene of one of the finest, strongest, and ablest motion pictures ever made.

"Sisters" is the most powerful story ever written about marriage.

Beginning Monday and all the week at the MODERN and BEACON Theatres.

One Necessary Evil

Trying Different Things, Etc.
Copyright, 1922, Max Compnay

A scientific student of children says the future generation is endangered by confining little children for long hours in close school rooms.

That is true, of course. An average school is a necessary evil. To lock young animals up, with discipline that keeps them motionless, during the best hours of sunlight, is about as preposterous as anything that could be imagined. But they must be educated—we call it education. The parents must be freed from their part of the day. And so, as education, we have that which an English writer has well described and discussed in his book, "The Curse of Education."

Senators and Congressmen are working at a bill to prevent the sale of firearms, revolvers, etc. You may prevent the sale to those that do NOT care to use the weapons. You will not prevent the sale to burglars, any more than you prevent the sale of other prohibited articles to those that want them. Easy to make laws, hard to rule men.

Sir Ross Smith and Sir Keith Smith, brothers and Englishmen, will endeavor to fly around the world. They will use a "Viking amphibian plane." On the water it will be like a boat. When land appears wheels will be dropped through the bottom of the boat, so that it can run on the ground.

The world will wish good luck to the Smith brothers. There is no jealousy in the realm of real accomplishment.

England, having made Balfour a Knight of the Garter and "Sir Arthur," now proposes to make him an Earl, if he will accept. That would take him out of the House of Commons and put him into the House of Peers, where he could comfortably do away his old age when it begins. He is entitled, for his work in Washington, to anything England can give him.

Here, having no titles, we can only reward men with money. Perhaps the title plan is cheaper.

A Congressman from Mississippi wants a law to prevent women smoking in public in Washington city. Women ought not to smoke until their days for having children are over. After that it is a matter of taste. You notice the objection to PUBLIC smoking. For ten thousand years men have been regulating what women should do in public, reserving quite different ideas as to what they might do in private.

There is an attempt to assassinate Baron Tanaka of Japan. Korean patriots are responsible; one is caught. Six were injured, but not Baron Tanaka. Holding down conquered people is dangerous to the holders.

A seventy-year-old restaurant cashier is shot down, and the bandit, confessing, tells his story simply. He and another "down and out ex-sailor" had between them enough money to buy a second-hand revolver. They tossed a coin to see which should use it in hold-ups.

The lot fell to the other man, but he wasn't skilful, so his partner used "the gun."

They had been doing quite well, in a small way, until his latest hold-up and shooting. We should never compromise with what is wrong, of course. But one way to diminish crime would be to supply work to those that need it. Among five millions idle and more or less desperate there will always be enough bandits to make life anxious.

If this Government is finally worrying about Europe's troubles, concentrate for a while on the problems of the United States; it would be a good thing for the public peace of mind.

The French pass a law allowing men after twenty-five to marry with the consent of their parents. Hitherto the consent was necessary until thirty. The law seems strange to Americans, who marry when and whom they please. But the French have views, and REASONS for them. A father is naturally to disinherit his children; he must divide his property among them. And the son is not allowed to decide when and whom he will marry. That has perhaps not encouraged QUANTITY in French population, but it has not interfered with QUALITY, judging by the kind of fighting the French have done recently.

Confidence Is Strength

Boston Business Leaders Organize to Create a Psychology of Optimism in Commercial Affairs

Boston is fortunate in the renaissance of determination by the business leaders of the community to resurrect or to create a psychology of optimism in our New England community. Just as the spirit of courage, the unconquerable spirit, the conquering confidence of an army is at least one-half its strength, so optimism—confidence—is one-half the strength of returned prosperity. It is never entirely spontaneous, and sometimes it is not at all spontaneous, but has to be entirely created.

This determination to mobilize optimism and confidence has resulted in the reorganization of the "Boston Better Business Bureau." This Bureau will be given soon a new executive manager and will begin its work with revived energy. The new manager will be Mr. Edward L. Greene, who has just graduated from similar work in the city of Cleveland.

The object of the Bureau is to promote integrity in advertising and other phases of business. Its success ought to be assured under its able board of officers. President, C. F. Weed, vice-president, of the First National Bank, vice-president, George B. Johnson, president of the R. H. White Company, and treasurer, Freeman Hinkley of Wrenn Brothers.

Allen Investigation

If there is to be an investigation by the Governor's Council of Bank Commissioner Allen's conduct as a condition precedent to their approval of his reappointment, let the investigation be thorough.

The one thing that we want to stop in this wild running about the streets of guilty men crying, "Stop Thief."

Keep the Movies Free

This Powerful Means of Influencing Public Opinion Should Not Be Interfered With

Moving pictures, though yet in their infancy, have already become almost as powerful a means of influencing public opinion as the press. Years ago our forefathers recognized that all agencies capable of influencing public opinion must be kept absolutely free from the influence of government, because the public itself must be free to form its opinions concerning its government, which is supposed to be controlled by public opinion. It would be a ludicrous contradiction to have a government, supposed to be under the control of public opinion, yet able itself to control the agencies of making public opinion.

Our forefathers recognized this fact and declared in all the Constitutions of the country, State and national, that the Legislature should pass no laws that interfered with the two great agencies which then existed for influencing public opinion—free speech and free press. These were considered the greatest safeguards of liberty.

Now there has arisen the moving picture, which, while yet in its infancy, has become almost as powerful an agent to mould public opinion as the newspapers. On every principle, by every rule of logic and common sense, by every warning of history, by every parallel of history, we ought to be as careful to keep the propagandist's power of the moving pictures as free from censorship as the newspapers themselves.

Yet in Massachusetts, where our Constitution, our organic law from which springs all the powers of our Government, says "the liberty of the press is essential to the security of freedom in a state; it ought not, therefore, to be restrained in this Commonwealth," our Legislature has passed a bill granting to the chief of our State police the power to control our moving pictures. The law might just as well give this man the power to control our papers.

Who is he? He is the same gentleman who prevailed upon Representative Graves of Springfield and Representative Draper of Hopedale to introduce in the Legislature, this year, a bill so vicious in its attack upon free press and free speech that these representatives themselves, soon as they discovered its character, asked to withdraw it. It was so bad that even Herbert Parker, counsel for the Beef Trust, who has been the spider weaving the web against free speech and free press and democracy in these parts lately, had to admit that the bill was too vicious to become a law. It struck at the very roots of liberty in this Commonwealth.

We may be thankful that we have the Initiative and Referendum and that this bill cannot become a law until the people of the State themselves approve of it. Then if they want to tie chains on themselves they have a right to do it. Montesquieu said that the people get whatever kind of government they deserve.

Dispute in Ireland

Over Adoption of Her Constitution Not Differing From Our Dispute Over Adoption of Our Own

A citizen of Albany the other day remarked to ex-Governor Glynn: "Just look at the troubles over in Ireland today. Didn't I tell you the Irish could not rule themselves?" Mr. Glynn smiled and asked his pessimistic friend if he did not remember that there was Civil War in Albany at the time of the adoption of our Constitution.

Mr. Glynn told his friend the following story:

Only the approval of nine States was needed to adopt the Constitution. Virginia was the ninth. New York had not yet come in. When the news reached Albany that Virginia had declared for the Constitution it was the Fourth day of July. The Federalists in Albany, the people who favored the Constitution, rang their bells and bellowed the city cannon. But in a counter-demonstration the Anti-Federalists, the people who opposed the Constitution, organized a parade, marched down to the river front, discharged thirteen guns and burned a copy of the Constitution. Then they went to dine at Hilton's Tavern. The Federalists were already dining at Lewis' Tavern. According to the historians, both sides celebrated with liberal potations of liquor. Fireworks which would not be contraband under the Volstead Act. In the zest of their jubilation, in their anger at the Anti-Federalists, the Federalists decided to raise the Constitution on the very spot where the Anti-Federalists had burned it. Some of the Federalists hastened off to get a copy of the Constitution, others went to the pine-bush, cut down a tree, took it to the fort, nailed the Constitution to the top of it and raised it on the exact spot where shouldered the embers of the fire in which the Anti-Federalists had burned the charter of our liberties, the Magna Charta of our rights.

Meanwhile the Anti-Federalists rushed from Hilton's Tavern, filled their pockets with stones, armed themselves with swords and clubs and set out in search of the Federalists. The two processions clashed on Green street, and a regular Kilkenny fight followed. The air was soon thick with stones, bayonets, swords, bricks, clubs and pieces of iron. The Anti-Federalists finally broke ground, got on top and victory was with the Federalists. IN THIS RIT OF ONE MAN WAS KILLED AND EIGHTEEN WOUNDED. SO IT SEEMS THAT THE PEOPLE IN ALBANY IN 1789 QUARRELED ABOUT THE QUESTION: WHO SHOULD BE THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES, JUST AS THE IRISH ARE QUARRELING IN IRELAND ABOUT THE IRISH FREE STATE TODAY. Just remember this, and maybe you will better understand and appreciate the troubles of the Irish in Ireland today.

This sort of thing went on all over the country.

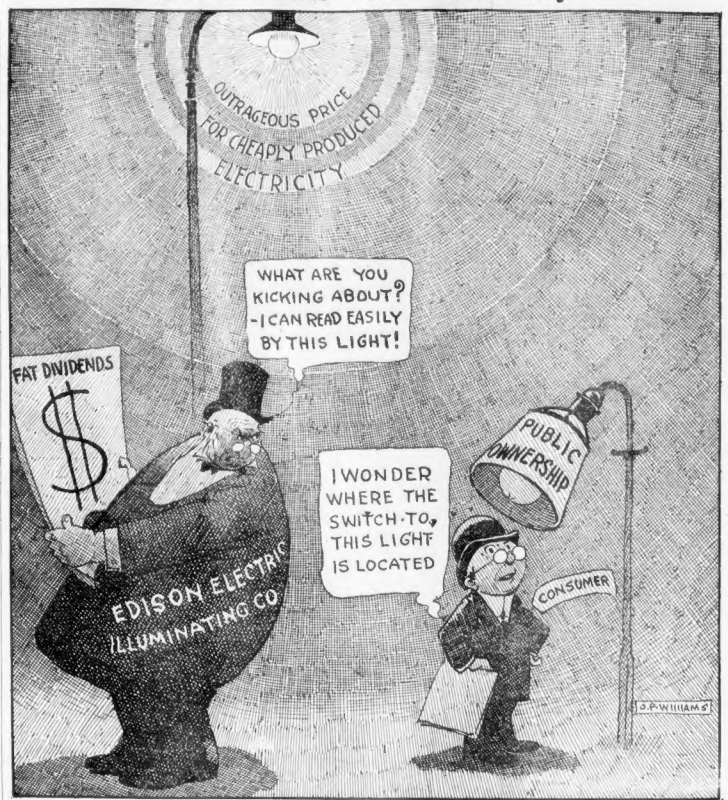

Gallivan the Tireless

Boston Congressman Introduced First Bonus Bill and Has Not Let Up Since

We suppose that the ex-servicemen recognize the fidelity and energy with which Congressman James A. Gallivan of Boston has worked in behalf of the bonus bill in Congress. He introduced the first bonus bill and has been busy ever since in the flesh of the Republican leaders pricking them constantly against their disposition to delay action on the bonus.

A member of Congress from another part of the country told a representative of the Boston American the other day that Gallivan was absolutely tireless and became almost a nuisance to the Republicans in his insistence upon a prompt attention to the bonus. There are very few men by temperament so persistent and active as Gallivan when once he gets his nose on a trail.

More Than Idle Curiosity

Somebody's Birthday

Copyright, 1922, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

It's today in your birthday year—fate will be on you largely of your own choosing. You are naturally endowed with a will which knows no defeat and you have the gift of emotional expression. You are afflicted with a certain artistic ability which you will probably never be able to develop beyond the stage of mere technical perfection, as you have not the gift of emotional expression. You should be better as an architect than as a painter or musician.

You might also write, but in a cold style, which, however, might it might even, would never enter you to your mind.

If ever you wonder why you lack the love and sympathy you most desire, think over your own nature and temperament as you are apt to be ungenerous in your spirit towards your fellow being.

Avoid taking an initiative today and be wary of giving any confidence.

New friendships formed this year will be useful and lasting and a romance awaits you under the sign of Scorpio—October 23 to November 21.

A child born today will be domestic in its tastes and will have robust vitality and be very popular.

Among persons born today: Henry B. Anthony—Statesman, Simon B. Buckner—Artist, Agnes Repplier—Author.

Smiles

AND THE FLEA?

"Children," said the Sunday school teacher, "this picture illustrates the story of the prodigal son. He was a wastrel who had no sense and he was to be taken home by his father and his wife and his children."

But go to school, for instance—go to high school, to college, or vocational school. And you will see flappers, hundreds of thousands of them, who are not the young folks are going to the domestic house.

Do not be misled by the superficial testimony of the streets. There, naturally, the flappers, from sixteen to thirty, are busy with their make-up, their hair, their parade, seeing and being seen and unconsciously spending money they have not earned.

But go to school, for instance—go to high school, to college, or vocational school. And you will see flappers, hundreds of thousands of them, who are not the young folks are going to the domestic house.

HERE IS SOLACE

Let me give you credit for one thing, at least. She has never buried at the disturbing business that we might be taken if we had not invented chewing gum.

FLAPPERS NOT REALLY RATTLE-BRAINED

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

YOU never can tell. Not even a flapper can be so silly as they seem.

We had in mind both kinds of flappers. The young girls, recently out of their jenny eyes and shaking their fluffy wings for their first flights. And those jawing goddesses, flip-flopping their unimpaired wits each other with their specialties in silliness, we might—no, we might miss the chance for more substantial mental labors. And appreciation!

Not that two wrongs make one right, or two fools make one wise person but, if we want to range the two sexes in opposing ranks and have them stand each other with their specialties in silliness, we might—no, we might miss the chance for more substantial mental labors. And appreciation!

So, seriously, to concentrate once more upon the deadlier species, there is no need to spend more desperate thought or feeling upon the apparent hopelessness of women, young and old, because they seem to concentrate so much time, attention, and money on artificial adornment and equally artificial adornment.

That has been the way of women, since the days of man's physical, economic and social supremacy; and will probably continue until, if ever, all women are economically emancipated and the men very largely outnumber the women.

And then you will see the average male drink and dance, parade and dance, to the music of the dominant female.

Meanwhile, do not let appearances deceive you. Not even flappers are as silly as they seem; nor are they really rattle-brained.

Indeed, in America at least and certainly in all cultural pursuits, the women are rapidly out-running the men. Witness the number of attendances of girls in high schools and colleges, and in vocational and professional schools. Witness also the growing army of female writers, artists and musicians.

Go to the lecture halls, concerts, art exhibitions—and then sit back and see the devotion of the spirit, men or women?

Don't laugh so hard at the flappers, dear Ma, nor rant so much against their silly ways. Consider their nerve, their serious meaning; be wise—and do like-wise.

Perhaps we can learn even from the flapper to be more optimistic regarding human nature in general. Those seeming, dumpy girls become the womanly women whom we admire and adore.

You never can tell. Probably most of us men are better and sadder than we seem.

Take American as Saint

By Universal Service, CONSTANTINOPLE, April 1.

—A conventionalized figure of a young American has been proposed for adoption as a sort of patron saint for the new Armenian nation.

The original suggestion to this effect came in a prose-poem written by the celebrated Armenian writer, Sebouh Stepanian, and published in the Ararat weekly, Shavhag.

"Our Patron Saint of these later days is young and strong and alert, his hair is not glossy-black, but like the golden ore of the wheat waving in the field; his eyes are bright to revive our waning faith and hope; his countenance is not colorless, but tinged a little with the light of compassion and goodness."

"Do you ask who he is? He is our American uncle; his star is the emblem of his generous gifts."

Ex Libris

By Zoe B. Faber.

HENRY SYDOR HARRISON. "Queer" and other equally splendid stories, has just emerged from a silence covering several years. His reentry into the field of books at this time is with "Saint Teresa" which is just off the press.

To those who like to see a continuation of the same sort of work, a writer, "Saint Teresa" will seem far short of the mark. It is too entirely different. On the other hand, to those who rely on an author's versatility and the ability to strike a totally different note.

Should prove quite a joy. So you see, it is largely a matter of your own taste of mind.

"Saint Teresa" is an entirely abnormal figure. She is remarkable things and the result was that she became grotesque. Splendidly contrasted with her, though, there is the character of Dean Mastry, who is very delicate, quite lovable, and never loses a moment's seriousness even when goaded into a fight which is a bit beyond the pale of things likely to transpire.

"Saint Teresa" to us did fall about that we have come to expect of Mr. Harrison. It is though, very readable and is making if not interesting because it is so completely the child of a vivid imagination.
